Course Videos

Each week will contain a number of short video lectures. These videos can be watched at slow or fast speed, in full screen or high definition, and with or without closed captioning. Additionally, downloadable transcripts and PowerPoint slides are provided for each lecture.

If you'd like to download videos to watch later on your mobile device, share with your friends, or present to your class, go right ahead! All of our content is available for use under a Creative Commons Attribution - ShareAlike License.

Discussion Forums

Each week, we encourage you to engage with others in the class on the discussion forums about issues, themes and arguments presented. Our moderators will provide you with a starting point for those conversations by posing questions related to the week's content, but feel free to go beyond those topics and dig deeper.

Some academic ground rules: don't copy-paste from others (plagiarise), be respectful of others' views, help each other, engage with each other meaningfully, and have fun.

Grading

This course has three compulsory writing assignments that are worth 30% of the overall grade. The instructions, criteria, and grading rubric are presented during the first week of the course and are available in the left navigation bar throughout the course. There are also eight end-of-week quizzes that are worth 70% of the overall grade. Students have until the end of the course to submit these for grading. In addition, writing activities and discussion topics are included throughout the course, but do not count towards the overall grade. In order to pass this course successfully, students will need to earn an overall mark of at least 50%.
